Mike Sailer is Repeat State Champ

[Brian Thompson] - The 2000 North Dakota Closed was played at the Doublewood Inn in Bismarck, ND on May 14-16. Mike Sailer scored a perfect 6-0 to retain the title of North Dakota State Chess Champion.

The second place finisher, Charles Haugtvedt gave Mike his most challenging game of the tournament. His other competitors were dispatched quickly and effortlessly in games such as the following:

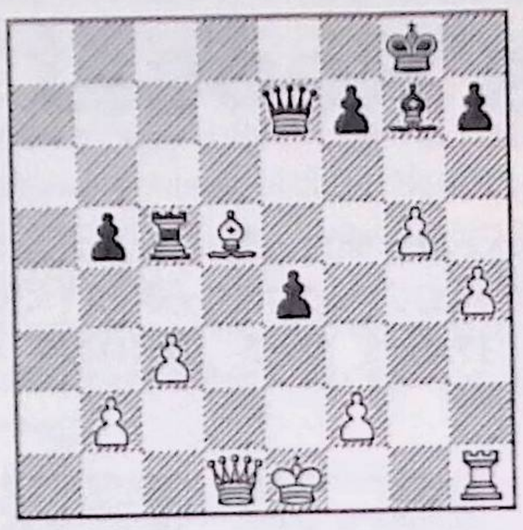
Subject: The Hand of Fischer?

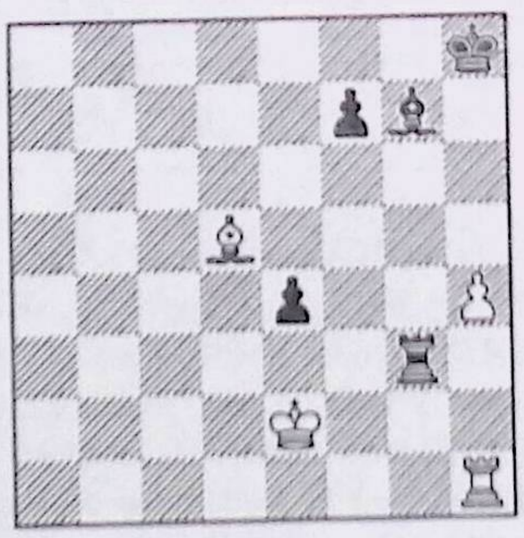
Could we be seeing the hand of Bobby Fischer behind some recent events in world chess?

The yound Hungarian Peter Leko has been on a fast track recently, the latest being a tie for 2-4 at Wijk aan Zee with Kramnik and Anand behink Kasparov. In their individual encounter, Leko held Kasparov to a draw in an interesting Sicilian:

Wijk aan Zee "Corus"
January 15, 2000 - round 11
W: Gary Kasparov (2851)
B: Peter Leko (2725)
1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 a5 6.Nbd5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 f5 11.c3 Bg7 12.exf5 Bxf5 13.Ne2·Be6 14.a4 O-O 15.axb5 axb5 16.Rxa8 Qxa8 17.Nce3 Qb7 18.g4 Ne7 19.Bg2 Nxd5 20.Bxd5 Qe7 21.h4 Rc8 22.g5 Rc5 23.Be4 d5 24.Nxd5 Bxd5 25.Bxd5 e4



26.Ke2 Qe5 27.Bb3 Qc7 28.Qg1 b4 29.g6 hxg6 30.Qxg6 Kh8 31.Qg3 Qxg3 32.fxg3 bxc3 33.bxc3 Rxc3 34.Bd5 Rxg3



35.Draw Agreed (½-½)

Now Shelby Lyman reports that Leko "is in frequent contact" with Bobby Fischer, who is living in Budapest, and that they regularly analyse hames and exchange ideas.

Kasparov has publicly disparaged Fischer, Lyman hints that coaching Leko may be Fischer's revenge. I can see Fischer's ego saying to Kasparov, "Not only can you not handle me, you can't even handle my student." If this is true, Leko may bear watching closely. If Fischer can impart even a portion of his skill without unbalancing the poor kid, there may soon be a new Sheriff in town.

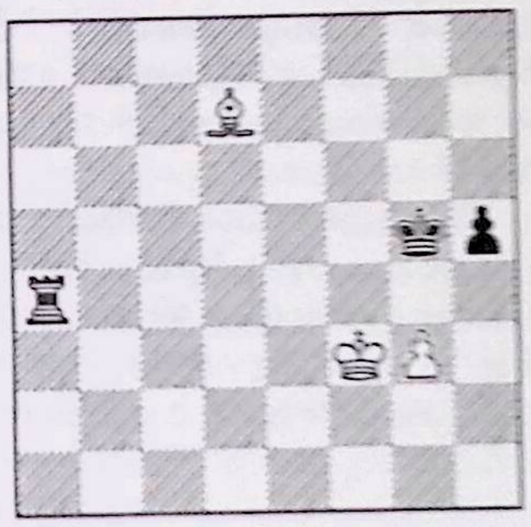
Subject: No Winning Chances Rule at the New York Open

In round 8 of the New York Open in the game between FM Jesse Noel Sales (2334) and GM Evgenij Agrest (2604) on board 27 a position arose in which White had a pawn on g3, a king on f3 and a bishop on d7 and Black had a pawn on h5, a king on g5 and a rook on a4. (See diagram, Black to move. BT)



It is clear that in this position, Black has no legitimate winning chances because the black king is prevented from crossing the squares f4, g4 and h4 and, if the black king tries to go around the side and to the back, the white king or the white bishop can threaten the remaining black pawn.

However, this game was played on a sudden death time limit. Thus, no matter how many moves the game went, when one of the player's flag falls, the game is over. When I came to the board, White had less than five minutes on his clock and had stopped keeping score and Black had about 20 minutes left.

White called for an arbiter and started saying "draw, draw". An arbiter finally came and started watching the game, but did not say anything and appeared ineffective.

I went out and told the Chief TDs,

Carol Jarecki, Sofia Rohde and Vince Moore what was going on, at which point John Fernandez (bless his heart) said that Black had a win by force. I then went back to the board. About 30 or 40 moves were played, during which Black set a few elementary traps and White successfully avoided them. The supposed arbiter said nothing.

Finally, Black pushed his pawn to h4 and White captured the pawn with gxh4. Black did not bother to recapture the pawn, so now it was an ending of rook against bishop and pawn. Another 30 or 40 moves were played. By this time, White had less than a minute on his clock and Black was down to 10 minutes.

Carol Jarecki finally arrived at the board. By the time she got there, Black had managed to chase White's king to the a1 square. The position was still clearly a draw, but the possibility that White might blunder and Black thereby win loomed larger. Since White had long since stopped keeping score, he could not claim the 50 move draw rule.

White was now saying "draw, draw" after every move. Finally, Carol Jarecki asked "Are you claiming a draw or are you offering a draw?" Sales replied that he was claiming a draw. Carol Jarecki then ruled that the game was a draw.

This situation is disturbing because, had Carol Jarecki not arrived and had the other ineffective arbiter remained in charge, White would eventually have fallen on time, assuming that he did not blunder and lose on the board. Could he have then claimed a "no winning chances" draw based on the fact that the idiot arbiter had not accepted his claim 30 moves earlier when made? I feel that if this had happened, White should have been awarded a draw, even though he may at some future point in the game have either blundered or fallen on time.

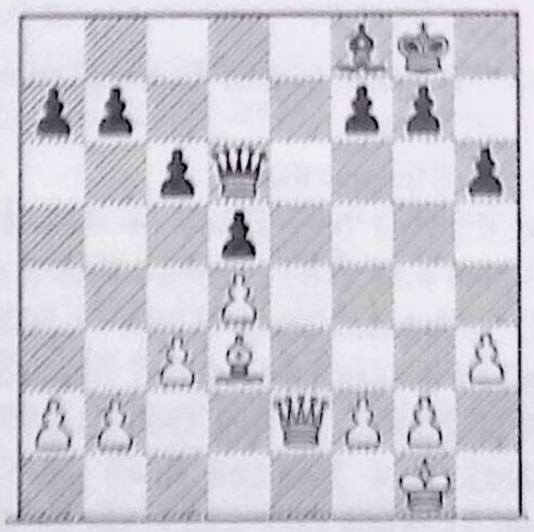
It seems unfortunate that a game between a FIDE Master and a Grandmaster could be subjected to the whims of an arbiter who obviously knows nothing about chess. In this case, White spoke English and Black did not. What would have been the ruling if White had not spoken English and had not been able to understand the arbiter's ruling?

The Rest of the Story

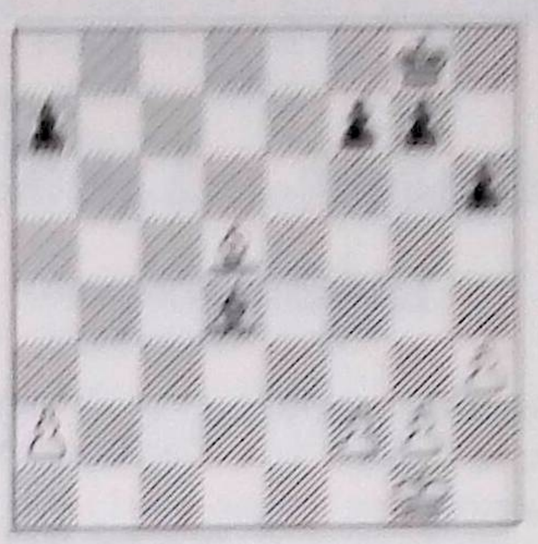
[John Leitel] - I've been thinking about publishing the following game for some time now. I doubt too many readers have seen it, as it hasn't appeared in the literature very often over the years. Transport yourself back to Nuremberg, 1883, and let's view an unusual struggle between Max Weiss and Berthold Schwartz, minor German masters of that Golden Era of chess a hundred and more years ago.

W: Max Weiss
B: Berthold Schwartz

1.e4 e6 2.d4 d5 3.exd5 exd5 4.Nf3 Nf6 5.Bd3 Bd6 6.O-O O-O 7.Bg5 Bg4 8.c3 c6 9.Nbd2 Nbd7 10.Qc2 Qc7 11.Rfe1 Rfe8 12.h3 Bxf3 13.Nxf3 h6 14.Bxf6 Nxf6 15.Nh4 Rxe1+ 16.Rxe1 Re8 17.Rxe8+ Nxe8 18.Nf5 Bf8 19.Qe2 Nd6 20.Nxd6 Qxd6



21.Qe8 Qe7 22.Qxe7 Bxe7 23.Bf5 Bg5 24.Bc8 Bc1 25.Bxb7 Bxb2 26.Bxc6 Bxc3 27.Bxd5 Bxd4



28.Draw Agreed (½-½)

It would be hard to imagine a game more evenly contested than this one. It would be hard to imagine one with positions more symmetrical than this. (I'm trying to avoid using the word "dull". I'm also trying to avoid using the word "pre-arranged".) Suffice it to say that neither player appears to have tried very hard, as every master is entitled to a day off once in a while. Perhaps it was the last round, and neither man had much to play for. Who can say?

The humor lies not just in the moves but in the names themselves. Did you catch that? Weiss? Schwartz? Remember your old high school German classes? What better names could two players have?! -- especially with the colors assigned they way they were.

Off and on now for years I've been collecting examples of such aptly-named pairs of opponents and propose to share some of them from time to time. Here's another just for starters.

A postal game report from Chess Review, September 1947: 46-C 331, Sargent 1, Pepper 0. This predates the famous Beatles album of that name by a full twenty years! Paul McCartney once said that he came up with the Sgt. Pepper name through misunderstanding someone who was asking for the salt and pepper. I think he must have gotten it through studying old copies of Chess Review! (The players, by the way, were H.W. Sargent and G. Pepper, two unheralded woodpushers of years ago who would be completely forgotten today but for the curious juxtaposition of their names.) More funny names later on...

Chess on the Internet

[John Allensworth] - As an inveterate Internet surfer I have come upon two dynamite chess web-sites that I believe many chess players in North Dakota will thoroughly enjoy.

Itsyourturn.com is a totally free browser-based playing site for those who prefer a more leisurely pace, a turn at a time, similar to postal chess. The really nifty feature about this site is that the graphical interface is always there for all the players' chess games, and can be accessed from any computer with Internet connections.

There are lots of add-on frills that make this website very useful to internet-connected chess players. The games can be printed out in pgn format or timestamp format for each game. Results are saved in the Itsyourturn.com database. The web-site also sponsors a variety of free chess tournaments open to any registered player.

Registration is simple and free - just choose a user name and a password and you are a registered user.

Presently there are over 200,000 users on Itsyourturn.com and over 1.25 million games have been played on this web-site. Admittedly, not all of these games have been chess games, as there are dozens of other turn-based games available to be played on the web-site too.

Tentatively, I am proposing that the 2001 North Dakota Correspondence Chess Championship allow this method for making moves, if both opponents are willing to do so. Of course, postal method would also be equally acceptable.

Another exciting web-site is the fancy KasparovChess.com product. This Garry Kasparov effort has spared no expense in trying to attract a wide variety of internet chess enthusiasts from rank beginner up to Master level players.

There are a multitude of features that are available for free including the wonderful multimedia lessons using the user-installed Student Client software. I just went through a couple of Bobby Fischer games, analyzed with an on-screen chessboard and the voice of a Master taking me through the variations and plans of these superb games.

There are multimedia lessons on attacking, tactics, openings, etc. More lessons are promised. The Student Client program enables you to stop, start, and replay the lesson as you wish. The download time for each lesson is around 5-10 minutes after which one can go over the lesson at their leisure.

Another dynamic feature of KasparovChess.com is the recent addition of On Line Master lessons for free on a scheduled basis. These lessons are free for a limited time only.

Give Itsyourturn.com and KasparovChess.com a try. I promise that most of you will find much of interest and utility in your quest for chess improvement and fun!
